that he did not believe the Union was worth fighting for. The "restoration of paternal re-" latious," he said, was "only to be secom-" plished by peaceful and conciliatory means." His purpose was not merely to catechize Mr. Lincoln, but to threaten him. There was not only the insolence of counseling the Chief Magistrate as if he were a special policeman, but the even greater impudence of presuming to speak for this great City which he thought he could band over to traitors. He probably was persuaded, about a month and a half later. that he was mistaken on this point; he will have some further and quite conclusive evidence of it, we trust, next week.

There has been some surprise among those who know him test that such a man as Prof. Henry L. Eustis of the Scientiffe School at Cambridge should not, long ago, have been called into active service by the Government. The reason, we presume to be, that in the multiplicity of duties, Mr. Eustis, not pushing himself into notice, was simply overlooked. We are glad to hear now, however, that he has offered his services to the Government, to be made use of wherever they are most needed. Mr. Eustis graduated the first scholar in his class at Cambridge; went afterward to West Point where he also came off with the highest honors; and is now, and has been for some years, Professor of Engineering in the highest School of Science in the country. A man of such attainments and abilities should not be permitted to spend them in the elementary work of the recitation-room when they are so peeded by the country, and we hope soon to hear of Prof. Eustis at the head of a brigade

Cupt. WILKES: In behalf of the City Council, I certainly is much that is yet to be Capt. Wilkes: In behalf of the City Council, I welcome you to the City of Boston, and, as the official representative of the citizens, I bid you a cordial welcome to this, their cherished Temple of Liberty. Here, in the presence of these departed heroes whose deeds you so notly emulated, we tender to you the homage of our respect. We honor you as an eminent scientific navigator and explorer, as a gallant and meritorious officer of our Navy, and for the segacity, judgment, decision and firmness which characterized your recent brilliant achievement, the effect of which upon the present rebellion may prove not less important than the glorious nay'd victories on the Southern coast.
